DEN ANTIGOON

Antigoon vs Brabo

According to the legend, Druon Antigoon was a "giant" man who lived in Antwerp. He was supposed to be a tax collector who charged a tax for all boats using the river Scheldt.

Those who didn't pay, he cut off a hand and threw it into the river.

Eventually a young Roman soldier, Brabo, fought Antigoon and won the battle.

He chopped off the hands of Antigoon and threw his hands in the river.

It is said that this story is the origin of the name Antwerp, Antwerpen in Flemish, where "werpen" = throwing and (h)ant" is "hand" or throwing the hand as in the legend

In front of the city hall you can see a statue where Brabo throws a hand away.
